BUCK DANNY

What's going on at the Riiser-Larsen peninsula?

Unknown jet fighters have been spotted over Antarctica. It's strange, because this international area was declared a demilitarized zone several years ago. Aircraft carriers never anchor there. Buck Danny and Sonny Tuckson are sent on a reconnaissance mission. They discover a dead body on the ice in a penguin colony. The diary they find on the body contains interesting information. The man was with a group of natural scientists, but their ship and helicopter were destroyed by the crew of a freighter. Who owned that ship, which didn't carry a flag? Why did the freighter carry trucks, what were they for? What secret expedition chose Antarctica for its operating base? And why is every ship that left the peninsula blown up? That's what Buck Danny has to find out, at great danger...

Highly recommended for readers whose idea of an exciting adventure starts at 10,000 feet.
